TO THE MEMBERS OF THE CONVENTION.—I would give notice that I have completed my Group Picture of the members of the Constitutional Convention, and am now prepared to fill all orders promptly. For beauty of finish, elegance of taste, and the finest work of Photographic Art, it is pronounced by all who have seen it to be far superior to any production ever gotten out in North Carolina. In comparison, all other attempts are a complete failure, as will be remembered by all the members who have seen both pictures.

The weather continues most beautiful, the air bright and bracing, and enjoyment of the luxury of October only marred by the dust. We learn there was a fine rain around and beyond Hillsboro on Tuesday night. Oh for just a little of it here.

We could really learn nothing in the way of local or general news at the State Capitol yesterday. The Treasury clerks are quietly awaiting the advent of the Sheriffs of the State to walk up and settle. All things considered, there will be flush times in the Treasurer's office about the first of December.

Work on the Post Office building has reached the beginning of the second story, and the building already shows its fine proportions. It is being pushed forward with all possible rapidity. [To be Continued.]

MRS. TROY'S.—Passengers on the N. C. Railroad may congratulate themselves on finding such excellent refreshment as is provided for them at Morrisville by the excellent lady whose name heads this paragraph.—We know few houses equal to it. It is a genuine Southern table in its appointments, plain, but abundant and everything excellent in its kind. We remember hearing a distinguished gentleman remarking one morning as he left the bountiful breakfast table that it was equal to the Metropolitan at New York, and for genuine comfort, this is no exaggeration.

Old Winston was a negro preacher in Virginia, and his ideas of theology and human nature were often very original. A gentleman thus accosted the old gentleman one Sunday: "Winston, I understand you believe every woman has seven devils. How can you prove it?" "Well, sah, did you ever read in de Bible how seven debbles were cast out's Mary Magalin?" "Oh, yes! I've read that." "Did you ebber hear of 'em bein cast out of any oder woman, sah?" "No, I never did." "Well, den, all de odders got 'em yet."

COTTON RECEIPTS.—Our reports for yesterday show a slight falling off in receipts as compared with the last ten days. But it is no indication that there is to be a falling off permanently. On the contrary, the season has hardly commenced. Yet up to this time the receipts have been nearly 14,000 bales, an increase of nearly 5,500 over last year. We confidently expect the receipts of the season to reach 40,000 bales.

LARGE SHIPMENT.—Mr. D. Reid Upchurch shipped yesterday between the hours of 8 a. m. and 4 p. m. the large number of 300 bales of cotton—the largest number ever shipped by any one person in one day from this market.

SAMPSON COUNTY FAIR.—We acknowledge an invitation to attend the annual Exposition of the Sampson County Fair to be held at Clinton on the 3rd, 4th, 5th and 6th of November.

DENIED.—Mr. J. Turner in the Sentinel, complains that "our Woodson" called him an old Aristocrat, at Oxford, and denies the grave charge. Woodson, Woodson, you "hadn't oughter" trouble the old man so.

Newspaper advertising promotes trade, for even in the dullest times advertisers secure by far the larger share of what is being done.—John Manning.

Friendship between Lee and Jackson

Believing that anything pertaining to the history of the the great Chieftain, Stonewall Jackson, and the inauguration of his statue in Richmond on Tuesday, would be read with more interest than anything we can write, we copy the following extracts from the sketch of his life in the Richmond Dispatch, in addition to what we have copied elsewhere to-day:

As appropriate to the unveiling of the Jackson statue we quote the following from Dr. Jones's "Reminiscences of Lee":

To Jackson's note informing him that he was wounded General Lee replied: "I cannot express my regret at the occurrence. Could I have directed events I should have chosen, for the good of the country, to have been disabled in your stead.

"I congratulate you on the victory which is due to your skill and energy." It was on the reception of these touching words that the wounded chieftain exclaimed: "Better that ten Jacksons should fall than one Lee." Several days afterwards, when his great Lieutenant was reported to be doing well, Lee p ayfully sent him word: "You are better off than I am; for while you have only lost your left, I have lost my right arm." Hearing soon after that Jackson was getting worse, he expressed the deepest concern, and said: "Tell him that I am praying for him as I believe I have never prayed for myself."

The 10th of May, 1863, was a beautiful Sabbath day, and Rev. R. T. Lacy, at the special request of the dying chieftain, left his bedside to hold his usual services at the headquarters of the Second corps. General Lee was present at the service, and at the conclusion he took Mr. Lacy aside to inquire particularly after Jackson's condition. Upon being told that he would not probably live through the day, he exclaimed: "Oh! sir; he must not die. Surely God will not visit us with such a calamity. If I have ever prayed in my life I have pleaded with the Lord that Jackson might be spared to us." And then his heart swelled with emotion too deep for utterance, and he turned away to weep like a child.

The warm friendship which existed between Lee and Jackson is in beautiful contrast with the petty jealousies and bickerings which have not unfrequently marked the relations and interfered with the success of military chieftains.

The rising fame of Jackson excited no envy in the bosom of Lee; but the praises of the Lieutenant were most heartily endorsed by the commander-in-chief, who gave him his full confidence and warm personal friendship. He announced to the troops the death of Jackson in the following order:

HEADQUARTERS ARMY NORTHERN VIRGINIA, May 11, 1863.
General Orders No. 61.

With deep grief the commanding General announces to the army the death of Lieutenant-General T. J. Jackson, who expired on the 10th instant at a quarter past 3 P. M. The daring, skill, and energy of this great and good soldier are now, by the decrees of an Allwise Providence, lost to us. But while we mourn his death we feel that his spirit still lives, and will inspire the whole army with his indomitable courage and unshaken confidence in God as our hope and strength. Let his name be a watchword to his corps, who have followed him to victory and on so many fields. Let his officers and soldiers emulate his invincible determination to do everything in the defence of our beloved country.

R. E. LEE, General.

In a private letter to his wife General Lee wrote:

"CAMP NEAR FREDERICKSBURG,
May 11, 1863.

* * * * "In addition to the death of officers and friends consequpon the late battle you will see that we have to mourn the loss of the great and good Jackson. Any victory would be dear at such a price. His remains to go to Richmond to-day. I know not how to replace him; but God's will be done! I trust he will raise up some one in his place. The papers will give you all the particulars. I have no time to narrate them."

The following extract from an article in the Southern Magazine on "Stonewall Jackson between his death-bed and his grave," by Major H. Kyd Douglas of Jackson's staff, well illustrates this point:

"On Monday morning, at the request of the officer in command of the Stonewall brigade, I went to ask General Lee if in his judgment it was proper to permit the old brigade, or a part of it, to accompany the remains of General Jackson to Richmond as an escort. I found the Commander-in-Chief walking in front of his tent, looking sad and thoughtful. He listened attentively to my request, and then in a voice as gentle and sad as his looks, replied: 'I am sure no one can feel the loss of General Jackson more deeply than I do, for no one has the same reason. I have lost a dear friend and an invaluable officer. I can fully appreciate the feelings of the men of his old brigade. They have reason to mourn for him, for he was proud of them. They have been with him and true to him since the beginning of the war. I should be glad to grant any request they might make the object of which was to show their regard for their lost general; and I am sorry that the situation of affairs will not justify me in permitting them to go with his corpse, not only to Richmond, but to Lexington, that they might see it deposited in its last resting place. But it may not be. Those people over the river are again showing signs of movement, and it is so necessary for me to be on hand that I cannot leave my headquarters long enough to ride to the depot and pay my dear friend the poor tribute of seeing his body placed upon the cars.' Then, after stating what orders he had sent to Richmond for the reception of the remains, he said: "His friends of the Stonewall brigade may be assured their general will receive all the honor practicable. But as General Jackson himself never neglected a duty while living, he would not rest the quieter in his grave because even his old brigade had left the presence of the enemy to see him buried. Tell them how I sympathize with them, and appreciate the feelings which prompted their request. Tell them for me, that deeply as we all lament the death of their general, yet if his body is only to be buried and his spirit remains behind to inspire his corps and this whole army we may have reason to hope that in the end his death may be as great a gain to us as it certainly is to himself."

His full confidence in Jackson was illustrated in the playful reply he made to one of his aids who came to his tent on the 29th of April, 1863, to inform him that the head had crossed the river in heavy force: "Well! I heard firing, and I was beginning to think it was time some of you lazy young fellows were coming to tell me what it was all about. Say to General Jackson that he knows just as well what to do with the enemy as I do."

To one of his trusted officers he said, after Jackson's death: "I had such implicit confidence in Jackson's skill and energy that I never troubled myself to give him detailed instructions. The most general suggestions were all that he needed."

In speaking of Jackson one day not long before his own fatal illness and of the irreparable loss the South sustained in his death General Lee said with emphasis: "If I had had Stonewall Jackson at Gettysburg we should have won a great victory. And I feel confident that a complete success there would have resulted in the establishment of our independence."

And this affectionate confidence of his chief was fully reciprocated by Jackson. In summer of 1862 (soon after General Lee had taken command of the army) some officer ventured to intimate in his presence that the new commander was "slow," and that the army needed such an active leader as the one who had just double quicked his "foot cavalry" through the splendid "Valley campaign." Instead of being pleased at the compliment intended to be paid him Jackson replied in indignant tones: "General Lee is not "slow." No one knows the weight upon his heart—his great responsibilities. He is commander-in-chief, and he knows that if his army is lost it cannot be replaced. No! there may be some persons whose good opinion of me may make them attach some weight to my views, and if you ever hear that said of General Lee, I beg that you will contradict it in my name. I have known General Lee for five and twenty years. He is cautious. He ought to be. But he is not 'slow.' Lee is a phenomenon. He is the only man whom I would follow blindfold."

The opinion thus expressed in the early days of their service together during the late war (they were comrades in Mexico) seems to have strengthened up to the death of Jackson.

In several private letters to Mrs. Jackson, General Lee expressed his warmest admiration and regard for her "great and good husband."

Those who have attempted to institute comparisons between Lee and Jackson, or to exalt one at the expense of the other, have utterly misapprehended the character of both. They were indeed par nobile fratrum. They worked together for the cause they loved—their bodies sleep near each other in the beautiful "Valley of Virginia"—and it is a pleasing fancy that when Lee "struck his tent" and "crossed over the river to rest under the shade of the trees" Jackson was the first to greet and welcome him to those fadeless joys.

HOW TO VANQUISH THE STOMACH'S TORMENTOR.—If the Enemy of mankind was permitted to exert his diabolical ingenuity in the invention of a new disease, he could scarcely devise one more worthy of his genius than dyspepsia. The dyspeptic sufferer is tormented by symptoms resembling those of almost every known malady, and is often worried into monomania by these conflicting and perplexing manifestations. A favorite though absurd hallucination of the victim of chronic indigestion is that he or she has the heart disease. Dyspepsia has often been pronounced incurable, but experience has shown that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will vanquish it, together with the constipation and bilious derangement which usually accompany it. Diseases of the kidneys and supposed rheumatic pains are also frequent concomitants of dyspepsia, but they, too, succumb to the above named invaluable corrective.

"JUDGE SETTLE'S annual fox hunt" is announced. Some rare old political foxes will chase the brush-tails with His Honor.

THE appointment of Chandler to be Secretary of the Interior is producing trouble in the cabinet. Jewell and Bristow, it is said, are both likely to resign at an early day.

IT is estimated that forty thousand people witnessed the funeral obsequies of General Pickett in Richmond on Sunday. There were five thousand men in the procession: among them, two military companies composed of negroes. These colored men must appear disloyal to the eyes of the blatherskites who control Grant's Kitchen Organ.

LITTLE DELAWARE deals with a wife-killer in this wise:

The Rev. John Andrew (colored) who killed his wife last April at Georgetown, Delaware, has been convicted of murder in the second degree. He was sentenced to stand on the pillory one hour, and be whipped with sixty lashes Saturday, to pay a fine of $5,000 and be imprisoned for life.

This is a fine case for the whining humanitarians to mourn over.

IN a note to the editor of the Christian Advocate, of this city, Rev. Dr. Craven states that the affairs of Trinity College are very prosperous. The increase in the number of students is 25 per cent. over last year. This is gratifying intelligence to all who feel an interest in the educational progress of the State. The roll of students at nearly all of our Collegiate Institutions show an increase in number—a fact which it is pleasant to note; for North Carolina is far behind most of the States in educational facilities for young men.

The Washington Chronicle says:

It will require 184 electoral votes to secure the next President. The Democracy claim 195 and give the Republicans 171. But the Democracy claim the States of Connecticut, North Carolina, Indiana, California, Oregon and Florida, none of which they will get. These cast 43 electoral votes and will swell the Republican vote to 214; which is just thirty beyond the figures necessary to elect. If Democracy can find comfort in these figures, so be it.

The Republicans are reckoning without their host when they count on North Carolina in the next Presidential contest. The Democrats intend to carry this State, in spite of the colored folks, the carpet-baggers and their white allies. But to do it, we should begin organizing now. "In time of Peace prepare for War," is a wise old saying; now is the time to begin the work of preparation for the next great political battle.

A WEEK since, Rev. Dr. Newman, pastor of the Metropolitan M. E. Church, of Washington City, uttered a prayer from his pulpit, in which occurred these words:

We thank Thee, O God, for the recent evidences exhibited by the people of their purpose to remain true to those principles by which a people will continue to be free, and that by those signs they showed a desire to perpetuate the principles inculcated by our forefathers, and to preserve them for future generations."

This is a fair sample of the political prayers that are now-a-days started upwards towards the Throne of Grace; we don't think they go higher than the ceiling of the church edifice. We do not feel concerned much for this, for such prayers availeth nothing; for we are taught that God pays no attention to any prayers but the prayer of Faith. Political prayers like Dr. Newman's have none of the ingredients of Faith: they are entirely too thin: they are nothing more nor less than stump speeches delivered from the pulpit by hypocrites with turned up eyes and folded hands and sanctimonious countenances.

A SINGULAR CASE.

Carruth, the Vicksburg editor, who was shot by Landis on March 19th, has at last died of his injuries; and Landis, who was out on a bond of $50 000 has been delivered up by his bondsmen and put in jail. Landis tried to settle "the little difficulty" on a pecuniary basis. He had offered his victim $6,000 in cash, and 1 280 acres in land.

This price for his blood Carruth refused; holding out for a higher figure. Landis then offered $12,500 in cash and securities, with the condition that Carruth should leave the State before the settlement was perfected.

Carruth was debating in his mind whether or not to accept this proposition—his mind was constantly excited on the subject; it became a burden to him that hastened his end. At day-break he would anxiously enquire, "Can you keep me till night, so we can fix those papers?" and at night, "You must keep me till morning, so we can settle that matter!"—Poor quill-driver, thou art now gone to "fix those papers" in another realm, and the "$12,500 cash" offered thee as a compensation for thy life-blood so cruelly shed will go to the Courts to shield thy murderer from the law, for he is one of those gold-plated criminals on whom "the strong lance of Justice heartlessly breaks."

"NOT ONLY EXCUSABLE, BUT IN EVERY WAY HONORABLE.

The National Republican contains the following:

The Raleigh NEWS says "the rising generation in the South are being taught that the war for Southern independence was not only excusable, but in every way honorable." In other words, the treasonable heresy of secession is being nursed into existence again to plague coming generations, if it does not disturb the present once more. And yet these Southern Democrats would have us believe that they have completely accepted the results of the war.

The comment of the Republican on what we said shows how eagerly that organ catches at anything which can be tortured by any means into an item for its "bloody-shirt" business. It is never so happy as when it has an opportunity of slandering the South. Like the viper, it will cease to bite only when it ceases to live. Vituperation of the Democrats, and especially the Democracy of the South, seems to be the sole object of its existence.

We can understand the reason of this. It is the nature of this venomous beast of the journalistic field, to strike with its poisonous fangs whatever comes in its way; but besides, it is the organ of a party which, judging from the columns of the National Republican, seems to have no policy towards the South, save the policy of hate. It stands upon the worn-out war-issues, and its standard is the bloody shirt. It cannot appreciate the sentiments of a Greeley, a Schurz, a Bartlett or a Bayard: it is as deaf to the music of reconciliation as the adder was to the sweet notes of Orpheus' lute.

The whole South has accepted the results of the war in good faith. The doctrine of secession is dead forever: it will never have existence again among us: the National Republican knows this as well as we do. But, at the same time, we shall ever maintain that the war for Southern independence was both honorable and excusable. Those who took the Southern States from the Union, and those who shed their blood and treasure did so under the strongest convictions of Right and the highest sense of Honor. May God palsy the Southern-born tongue that would dare say that Robert E. Lee acted dishonorably when he resigned his position in the United States to cast his fortunes with his own people; or that Stonewall Jackson was blameworthy when he marched to the Virginia frontier to defend her soil from invasion!

THE GREAT REVIVALISTS.

Moody and Sankey have begun operations in Brooklyn. If the devil may be compared to a lion, we might say that these bold revivalists have gone to beard the lion in his den: we believe it was St. Paul who said "the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour." But Brooklyn is called the "City of Churches," and it is the home of Henry Ward Beecher, and other latter-day Saints. We may therefore do Brooklyn an injustice in intimating that it is a favorite stamping ground of him who goeth to and fro in the earth and walketh up and down in it, like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour.

Five thousand people are said to have attended the first Moody and Sankey prayer-meeting. Think of it! More folks than were congregated beneath Cole's tent last Saturday night. And this is but the beginning of the revival. Congregations thrice as large may yet gather to listen to these remarkable evangelists; it will be remembered that in London they preached once to as many as fifteen thousand persons—larger crowds never flocked to hear the gospel preached, in any age of the world. They have excited the whole religious world: they stirred the christian sentiment of England to its profoundest depths. The sensation which they have created is unprecedented: what will be the end of it remains yet to be seen.

What is the reason of it all? How is it that two humble Americans can awaken religious thought and feeling, more than thousands of sermons from thousands of ministers—in England, in Scotland and in America? They are not wonderful men; they are not geniuses; they are not more learned than thousands of others; they have no very remarkable gifts of eloquence; and they are not ministers, but simple laymen, making no claims in being divinely commissioned to do their work.

The secret of their power and influence is, we think, their non-sectarianism; they simply preach "Christ and him crucified," caring little or nothing for church organizations of any kind: so that they as it were stand upon a platform, a sort of common ground, on which men of all religious sects, creeds, beliefs and opinions, may meet, without clashing and producing discord; and all people who belong to no church, make no professions of religion, and have definite beliefs, must necessarily feel a deep interest in the preaching of these non-sectarians. We believe they are the first great revivalists who have gone outside the pales of the various churches, and beyond the lines of all sects, to prosecute the work of evangelizing the world—proclaiming the gospel and winning souls to Christ.

In addition to this, we find a secret of Moody's power in the simplicity, earnestness, and powers of his extemporized sermons. He talks to the people, in an original, eloquent, and captivating manner; he leaves to others the task of wearying congregations with elaborate, scholarly, and classical pulpit productions. If the ministers of the gospel would profit by the example of Mr. Moody in this respect alone, they would find their preaching more effective, and more godless sinners congregating around their pulpits every Sunday to learn something about that dark and dreaded eternity over which God's word alone has thrown a beam of Light.

The Jackson Statue.

The Richmond Dispatch of Monday morning, the day of the unveiling of the Jackson statue in that city, contained some twenty odd columns descriptive of the life and death of Stonewall Jackson, the relations between him and the great Lee, the esteem in which he was held as a soldier and as a man, and of the statue itself. We copy the following:

HISTORY OF THE STATUE.

Much has already been written concerning the history of the statue, and it is only necessary now to state briefly the main facts connected with it. It was the noble gift of an association of English gentlemen formed in England directly after the death of General Jackson, in the summer of 1863. They subscribed a sufficient amount of money—about four thousand guineas—to secure a work of art by the first artist of Great Britain, and their intention was to present it to the Confederate States, to be placed at its capital in Virginia. They secured the services of Foley, the greatest sculptor Great Britain has produced since the time of Chantrey, but the many great works he was then engaged on delayed the execution of the undertaking.

He made a model, which was cast in plaster, when the downfall of the Confederacy shrouded the hearts of all its lovers in sorrow here and in Europe. Foley then directed his attention to the great equestrian statue of Sir James Outram, former Governor-General of India, for the Indian Government, and subsequently to the colossal statue of the Prince Consort, after his death to be placed in the Albert Memorial, which the wives of Great Britain erected to the memory of Prince Albert at Kensington.

Matters remained in this way until the year 1872. About that time the Association of the Army of Northern Virginia, General Fitzhugh Lee being president, heard that some inquiries were being made about the statue to secure it for Lexington. It was contended that the spot where the hero of so many battles was buried was the proper place for the erection of the statue. Winchester was also suggested. They were informed that the English Association were refraining from moving in the matter because they feared it might be indelicate, in view of the recent relations of Great Britain to the United States, or might be doubtful whether it would be well received by the people who controlled the State Government of Virginia. They therefore passed resolutions thanking the English gentlemen having the matter in charge for their action in preparing the statue to be presented, assuring them that it would be received with gratitude by all the people of Virginia, and offering to be the medium of its presentation; and in as much as we were then about to enter into a State election which might possibly throw the State into the hands of the party not in sympathy with us, they proffered their services to receive and hold it upon the trust to be delivered to the State whenever our own Government should be restored to our own control.

They furthermore expressed in very positive terms their sentiments that Virginia was the proper recipient of it, and that Richmond, her capital, the proper spot for its location and erection. General Bradley T. Johnson, who was then about to visit Europe, was requested to convey these resolutions and these views to the proper parties.

HISTORY OF THE PLASTER CAST.

General Johnson did go to Europe, and immediately on his arrival in England waited upon Mr Bereshford Hope, whom he found had control of the matter, and received from him the most gratifying attention. Mr. Bereshford Hope introduced him to Mr Foley, and they together inspected the plaster cast in Mr. Foley's studio, in Great Osnaburgh street. The likeness had been made from a photograph of Jackson taken in 1849 and was no likeness at all, and all the historical details were incorrect. General Johnson immediately wrote to Geo. L. Christian, Esq., to have a photograph taken of a portrait of Jackson in General Johnson's house, the best and only true one extant and to send it, with copies of Virginia buttons and sword-buckles, to Mr. Foley, which Mr. Christian did. General Johnson also tried to procure from the sculptor Volck a copy of a mask taken by him after death, but was unable to get to Munich, where Volck then was, and so failed to furnish it. From descriptions given by him, and from the photograph of the oil-portrait, and also a photograph taken by Minnis in April, 1863, just before Jackson's death, the present statue was remodelled.

A Letter From Mr. Kingsbury Concerning the Proposed History of North Carolina—His Reasons for Not Including the War Period.

Mr. T. B. Kingsbury, of Oxford, in a recent letter to the Wilmington Star relative to his intention to prepare a "History of North Carolina for Schools and Families," says:

At the earliest practicable moment, I expect to begin to write an elaborate history of our State, covering the same period contemplated in the more compendious work, which I hope to complete in four or five years, if my life should be spared. We need a full, elaborate, reliable history covering the first three hundred years of our career as a people—a history that shall be in all respects adapted to the wants of the student, the man of learning, the intelligent and cultured reader—a history for the fireside and the library. In two compact volumes of 500 pages each, with illustrations, maps, index notes, such a work can be contained. It will be impossible to condense the history of North Carolina for three hundred years within smaller compass, without making it too compendious. For my school history I have in mind the work of Green to which you referred—the very best work in our language. But we need a more extended work for libraries; not too voluminous, and yet full enough to allow a thorough treatment of those parts of our history which are so replete with interest and worthy of study. Massachusetts has such a work in 2 volumes which is a model of its kind.

My reason for not including the war period in the plan of the work is that I do not think the time has come for a fair, truthful and thorough history of the State during those troublous times. However pains-taking, candid and conscientous, the historian would inevitably offend many persons who were active participants in the stirring scenes. It will not do to treat of historic events until the makers of history have passed away. Besides, the four years of the war of the States were so pregnant with great results and grand events, that an independent work would be required to fittingly tell the story. The magazine with which I am editorially connected, and which you have so often noticed favorably and earnestly, is doing a work that will be of much advantage to the writers who shall hereafter treat of our own times. Every war incident, every historical or biographical sketch, every personal anecdote, will furnish material for him who shall essay to tell future generations of the great deeds of North Carolinians in one of the most tremendous contests of the world.

I have the honor to remain,
Yours gratefully and truly,
T. B. KINGSBURY.

EDUCATED NATIVES.—A native gentleman writes to the Friend of India from Behar: I asked an opulent Zemindar the other day, "Why don't you educate your son, instead of loading him with ornaments as a temptation to some ruffian to murder him?" With a grave face he told me that his nephew had learned to read and write, and was looked upon as a learned young man in the village: but he died of the small-pox, and the same coindence having occurred in his uncle's family, it is now settled once for all that "learning in our family is inauspicious, and brings adversity and death." It is the fact that nothing will induce any member of the family to learn. Do we not see hundreds of educated men, added he, absolutely starving, while ignorant men are enjoying ease and comfort? Besides learning unfits a man of our clan to follow his walk of life, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred learning makes a man good for nothing.

The Baltimore Gazette, speaking of the dedication of the new City Hall on Monday, says: "The strangers that were in the city yesterday had a splendid opportunity for ocular proof of the fact that our Baltimore ladies are the most beautiful in the country. The streets through which the procession passed were like some vast conservatory filled with the rarest and most beautiful flowers of the human family, if indeed they were not angelic."

It must be good, for everybody recommends it, and the doctors prescribe it. We mean Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Price, 25 cents.

THE CONNECTICUT MUTUAL
Life Insurance Company
OF HARTFORD.

Incorporated in 1846.

Total Income during 1874, $10,049,013.10.
Total surplus returned to Policy-holders during 1874, $3,037,872 83.
Average per cent surplus returned to policy-holders in 1874, 40.41 per cent.

This percentage of surplus returned is much greater than that of any other company, and more than twice that of several leading ones. It is the legitimate and inevitable result of care in the selection of risks and high rate of interest received from well-invested assets. As the actual cost of the insurance to the policy holder is regulated, not by the table rate charged, but by the amount the Company is able to save and return to him from the premium paid, this latter item is of the greatest importance. Manifestly the company which is able to return to its policy holders the most surplus premiums, furnishes the insurance at the lowest cost. And this, the history of its policies shows the Connecticut Mutual is actually doing.

Total amount of Surplus Premiums returned from organization to Dec. 31st, 1874, $25,300,797 67
Surplus Premiums are returned annually commencing at the payment of the second premium.
Total amount of Claims paid from Organization to Dec. 31st, 1874, $20,300,974 53.

THE DAILY NEWS.

THURSDAY ..... OCTOBER 28, 1875.

NORTH CAROLINA.

The fall session of Orange Superior Court commences next week.

The Baptist Church at Hillsboro has been enclosed by a substantial paling.

Highway robbery on the streets of Wilmington is a portion of the bill of fare served up in the local of the Star of Tuesday morning.

Richmond city sent Mr. Jno. W. Rocket to Charlotte to escort Mrs. Gen. Jackson and her daughter to that city to witness the unveiling of the Jackson statue. A delicate compliment handsomely paid.

Says the Charlotte Observer of Tuesday: "Gov. Z. B. Vance left last night for St. Joseph, Mo., upon an invitation from the Jewish citizens of that place. He will deliver both of his celebrated lectures, "The Sacred Nation" and "The Democracy" and will be absent about ten days."

Says the Charlotte Observer of Friday: "Capt. Jos. G. Morrison left yesterday for Richmond. He informed us that all the surviving members of General Jackson's staff, Col. Welbourne of the signal corps of Virginia excepted, will be present at the unveiling of his statue to-day. All are living except Col. Pendleton who was killed just before the close of the war."

The colored people of Wilmington propose having a fair or exposition in that city on the 27th, 28th and 29th of December, under the auspicies of the "Industrial Fair Association." A large three-story building, with stables and spacious grounds attached, have been procured for the purpose. Addresses will be delivered by ex-Congressman Robert Elliott, of South Carolina, and O. H. Thackery, of this State. In a circular issued by the Association they say they desire to show the world what our colored people can do in the way of farming, mechanism, art, needlework, cabinet-work, masonry, blacksmithing, stock-raising, &c. So we learn from the Star.

The Hillsboro Recorder says: "A negro man named George Borland was committed to the jail last week for attempted violence on a little daughter of Mr. George Rhodes, aged about 12 years. She was on her way to school when she was met by the scoundrel, and stopped under pretense of giving her a letter. He seized her by the arm, and placed his hands over her mouth to suppress her cries. Fortunately another negro appeared in sight, and the scoundrel fled. The little girl fled to the other negro for protection, who conducted her to the school house, where the alarm was given and pursuit instantly made. The arrest was soon made, and the attempted ravisher brought down and examined before squire Murdock. His own confession justified his committal to jail for want of bail."

The Wilmington Star of Tuesday has the following additional information concerning Gen. Colston's death:

A letter was received by Maj. J. A. Byrne, yesterday, from Gen. R. E. Colston, dated at El Obeid, Kordofan August 25th, and also one by Col. John L. Cantwell, in reply to one written by him in April last under the auspices of the officers of the Third N. C. Regiment, of which he is Secretary, in which he says that he is slowly but steadily improving, though still very helpless, unable to walk or even stand alone, and could not say when he would be able to recross the desert on his return to Cairo. He is receiving every attention and comfort at El Obeid and has for his quarters a very commodious building, well ventilated, convenient and pleasant. He rides out every day in a little donkey cart which he carried with him on the expedition, and which is an object of great curiosity to the natives, who never saw a vehicle before, while hundreds of men, women and children follow him in his daily trips. He describes a tree which he saw being one of his rides, which is known as the Baobab, the singular dimensions of which are very striking and peculiar. It was seventy feet in circumference, from forty to fifty feet in height, and at a distance resembles a huge cabbage. He received a letter from Gen. Stone, Master of War and Chief of the Khedive's staff, and also communications from Cols. Purdie and Mason, commanding another expedition which was to act in concert with his, highly complimenting him for the zeal and indomitable energy he displayed in his determination to remain with and conduct the expedition in despite of the sufferings he was experiencing, only giving up his purpose when death was actually staring him in the face and it was absolutely impossible for him to proceed further.

Extraordinary Opportunity for the Relief of the Afflicted.

The surgeons of the National Surgical Institute, located at Indianapolis, Indiana, have finally yielded to the many urgent appeals to visit the South. Three or more of the surgeons will be at the Pavilion Hotel, Charleston, S. C., November 3, 4, 5 and 6, 1875.

They will have with them a great amount of surgical apparatus, appliances, etc., and competent assistants and workmen to change, fit, and make such apparatus as may be required. They will come especially prepared to treat all surgical cases: Paralysis, all kinds of Deformities of the Face, Spine, and Limbs, Diseased Joints, Diseased Eyes, Catarrh, Private Diseases, Piles, Fistula, etc. On account of the great expense attending such a trip, they will not make another; therefore, all who wish to avail themselves of the advantage of the Institute, without the long journey to Indianapolis, must do so at this time. No cases will be undertaken without a fair hope of relief. It is needless to say that the institution is entirely responsible, and the largest and most popular of the kind in America, curing thousands annually. Remember the time and place, and come early. Send to the Institute for circular.

SHE HAD ARRIVED.—A night or two since, while a Vicksburger was enjoying his first sound nap, there came a ring at the bell. He started up, waited, and there came another. He refused to get up until a third ring came, when he raised a window and called out:

"Who in the thunder, and Satan and the Devil are you!"

"I am thy mother-in law!" was the prompt reply: "and as soon as I get into the house, I'll fix you for calling me such outrageous names!"

"Engagements" are sometimes advertised in the New York Herald.
